Summary

Dorothy's care costs have run significantly over budget this quarter at $12,135, which is nearly double what was allocated. The 122 services she received suggest her needs have increased substantially, and while this is good news in that she's getting the support she needs to stay healthy (no hospitalisations in the past year), you'll need to have a conversation with BlueBerry Care about whether her care plan and budget are still appropriate. The 50 low-level anomalies flagged are minor and nothing to worry about, but the main thing you should focus on is working with the provider to understand whether Dorothy's care needs have genuinely grown or whether there's been a change in how services are being delivered, so you can plan your budget properly going forward. It's clear Dorothy is being well supported, but you don't want surprises like this every quarter.
