Summary

Dorothy's using about half her quarterly budget at the moment, which suggests her care needs are being well managed without overreach. She's received 83 services this quarter through BlueBerry Care, and importantly, there haven't been any hospitalisations in the past year, which is a really positive sign that her support is working. The system has flagged 54 low-level anomalies, mostly minor variations in scheduling or service delivery, but nothing that's raised serious concerns. The main thing to keep an eye on is whether Dorothy's needs might be changing as time goes on, since having some spare budget room means there's capacity to adjust her care if that becomes necessary.
