Summary

Dorothy's care costs have significantly exceeded her approved budget this quarter, running at 182% of what was allocated, which means you've spent just over $5,400 more than expected. The good news is that she received solid support with 122 services delivered and hasn't needed hospital care in the past year, which suggests the care is keeping her reasonably well. However, the budget overspend is the thing you really need to address with BlueBerry Care straight away, as it's not sustainable and you deserve a clear explanation of why costs have blown out. The 50 flagged anomalies are rated as low concern, so they're not urgent safety issues, but they're worth reviewing alongside the budget conversation to understand what's driving the extra costs. I'd recommend sitting down with the provider this week to work out whether Dorothy's care needs have changed, if there's been an invoicing error, or if the original budget simply didn't account for her actual support requirements.
