Summary

Dorothy's care costs have significantly exceeded the budgeted amount this quarter, with spending at 182 percent of the $6,681.60 allowance. The 122 services received suggest she's receiving good support, and it's encouraging that she hasn't needed hospital care in the past year, which shows her home support is working well overall. However, the overspend of around $5,453 is the thing that needs your immediate attention, as this pattern will become unsustainable without adjusting either her care plan or budget. BlueBerry Care has flagged 50 low-level concerns, none of which are currently open issues, so these appear to be minor matters rather than safety problems. I'd recommend having a conversation with BlueBerry Care to understand whether Dorothy genuinely needs more frequent services than her current budget allows, or whether there's an opportunity to streamline her care plan to bring costs back in line.
