Summary

Dorothy's care costs have significantly overrun this quarter at 182% of budget, meaning BlueBerry Care has spent nearly double what was approved. While it's reassuring that she hasn't needed hospital care, the spending pattern suggests her support needs have grown beyond the original plan, and this will need to be discussed urgently with her provider and aged care coordinator. The good news is that services are being delivered consistently (122 this quarter), but you'll want to clarify with BlueBerry Care whether the extra spending reflects genuine increases in her care requirements or if adjustments to her plan could bring costs back in line. This is the most important thing to tackle now, as continuing at this rate will strain household finances and you may need to explore whether her care classification should be reviewed.
