Summary

Dorothy's care costs have significantly exceeded the planned budget this quarter, running at 182% of what was approved, which means BlueBerry Care has spent an extra $5,453 beyond the $6,681 allocation. The good news is that Dorothy has received plenty of support with 122 services delivered, and there haven't been any hospital visits in the past year, suggesting her care is keeping her stable and at home where she wants to be. However, you'll need to have a conversation with BlueBerry Care soon to understand why costs have grown so much and whether this is a one-off situation or a pattern that will continue, as this level of overspend isn't sustainable. The flagged concerns appear to be low-level administrative matters rather than anything urgent affecting Dorothy's wellbeing, so there's nothing requiring immediate crisis attention. Moving forward, it's worth exploring whether Dorothy's care plan needs adjusting to better match her actual support needs and budget.
